VOLUME LXVI., NUMBER 4. REDWOOD CITY, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1926. ESTABLISHED 1859

FRIENDS MOURN DEATH JUDGE FITZPATRICK

By D. E. O'KEEFE

Edward Francis Fitzpatrick, the fullness of years, ripe wisdom and crowned with success, nestor of the bar of San Mateo county, passed into the land of darkness, a land misty with the low of death, early last Monday morning after a long illness. The news of his death was a great shock to his family and friends and to the people of Redwood City, where he had a long and successful career and where he was beloved by all.

The passing of Judge Fitzpatrick removes from earthly activities a San Mateo county pioneer, a sterling citizen, a profound lawyer, a loyal friend, a devoted father and a loving husband and a true Christian. His fealty to his community was one of the outstanding characteristics of his life. With deep devotion and ardent zeal, with all affection and fervor of heart, he gave freely of his energies to the upbuilding of the city of his boyhood and to the advancement of the locality where he had spent his many useful years. He was no less devoted to his friends. He loved them and grappled them to his heart with ties of steel. Mr. Fitzpatrick was ever faithful and loyal to his friends and his community.

Judge Fitzpatrick was born in Auburn, Essex county, New Jersey, November 28, 1858. He came to Redwood City with his mother in 1868, his father having preceded him here a short time before to engage in the hotel business. He attended the local public school and at an early age matriculated in St. Mary's College in what was on the Mission road, San Francisco. The young man had a brilliant career in that institution as a student and scholar and graduated with the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1877 and some years ago that college conferred upon him an honary degree for his scholastic attainments.

His preliminary professional training was received under the tutelage of the late Harvey Kincaid, a noted lawyer of his day, father of Archer Kincaid, the well known attorney. Mr. Fitzpatrick was admitted to the bar before the supreme court of the state of California at Sacramento in 1880. For a time he practiced in the office of Mr. Kincaid and after that he opened an office for himself in the Cook building on Main street. Here he practiced law with wonderful success until 1888, when Governor Waterman appointed him to fill the vacancy in the Superior court caused by the death of Judge E. F. Head. After a brilliant career of one year on the bench he retired to active practice being succeeded by Judge George H. Buck, who has since held the position. Judge Buck became his brother-in-law, having married Miss Lizzie Fitzpatrick some years ago.

In 1886 Judge Fitzpatrick married Miss Mary A. O'Connell, a native daughter of San Mateo county and a daughter of Mrs. Ann Monohan of Menlo Park. The bride was a beautiful and charming young woman. The couple were married in the Church of the Nativity, Menlo Park, by the late Father M. O. Riordan. The best man was A. D. Walsh, the local realty broker.

Judge Fitzpatrick was a marked success in his profession. He had a broad comprehension of the theory and practice of law which was supplemented by those admirable characteristics of faithfulness and energy. He participated in many important law suits in the county, and for many years was the attorney for the late Millbrae, Crowe, the public administrator. Mr. Fitzpatrick appeared as the attorney for the administrator in the famous Miller and Cake about tweny-five years ago. For his work in the case he was allowed a fee of $15,000, a gratuity in those days.

Judge Fitzpatrick was a staunch republican and for eleven years served as the secretary of the Republican County Central Committee and for a number of years was a member of the State Central committee. He never sought any recognition for himself but always fought for his friends. It was only through his influence that Timothy Guy Phelps was made collector of the port of San Francisco in 1890.

He was a warm friend of the late James D. Byrnes, who was at one time the political leader of San Francisco, county and represented San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties in the state senate for nearly twenty years.

Judge Fitzpatrick had been ailing for several years before his death but not until the last three months was he compelled to give up work.

On Monday when his death had been announced in the Superior court and Judge Buck adjourned out of respect for the memory of the deceased. The flag at the court house, and the flags at the schools and over the business houses in town were placed at half mast until after the funeral on Wednesday, as a mark of respect to the dead jurist.

The funeral was attended by friends from all over the county, every section was represented. Mount Carmel church was packed by mourning friends who came to pay their last tribute of respect to the one they had loved so well. The services were simple but very impressive. The eulogy spoken by Father Kennedy was touching and beautiful. He paid a tribute to the deceased for his loyalty to his friends and to his community and also spoke feelingly of Mr. Fitzpatrick's faith in his religion, his child-like simplicity and his great faith and hope in the future life. Father Kennedy waxed eloquent in speaking of the many splendid Christian qualities of the deceased.

On the altar were many clergy men, among whom was Brother Agnon, who taught Mr. Fitzpatrick in St. Mary's College in the seventies The brother bent with age, came all the way from Berkeley, to be at the bier of his former pupil. Several of the former classmates of the deceased attended the obsequies among whom were: W. J. Murray, Menlo Park, Jos. Burns of Redwood City and J. H. O'Keefe of Menlo Park.

The honorary pall bearers were members of the county bar association, Hall C. Ross, Archer Kincaid, J. J. Bullock, James T. O'Keefe, G. B. Ferrell, Joseph B. Gordon, C. N. Kirkbride and T. Limpert. The active pall bearers were A. D. Walsh, J. V. Swift, D. P. Flynn, Joseph Perry, John Weller, D. R. Stafford.

A large number of friends followed the remains to Holy Cross cemetery, Menlo Park, where the body was consigned to its last resting place beside the grave of his mother.

Edward F. Fitzpatrick lived a helpful, happy life and his final passing could have been in the words of Bryant in Thanatopsis:

"So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

REDWOOD CITY TRUSTEES REFUSE REPAIR PERMIT

A request for a permit to repair the old Germania hall building on Broadway which was badly damaged by fire a few weeks ago, was denied by the board of trustees of this city at their meeting Monday. The building is a frame building and was badly damaged by the fire which enveloped the whole upper interior. As the building is within the district, set aside as a fire district in Redwood City's fire ordinance in which only fireproof buildings are allowed to be constructed, it was felt by the board that the structure is a menace to the town.

The owners of the property, Miss Bertha Kuck and her sister, Mrs. John Welsh of Menlo Park, were represented by Attorney A. J. Stebenne. A letter was presented from L. M. Pollard, stating that he could repair the building for about $45000, and Henry Weeden of Menlo Park, contractor, was present and stated that the building could be repaired. The testimony of Building Inspector I. C. Drathman was, however, that the building was so badly damaged and the timbers were so rotten that the only way would be to rebuild it entirely.

Among those who addressed the meeting were Henry Witte and Dan Stafford, who had just returned from the realtors convention held in Stockton. Elmore B. Hinman, president of the local organization, spoke on the advantage of securing terminal rates for shipping here, and stated that the fact of not having these rates had resulted in the loss of one of the largest furniture manufacturing plants in the country within the past week.

Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey told the assembly of the action taken that morning by the supervisors in forming an improvement district at Five Points. This was greeted with great applause.

Julius Smith will be chairman of the meeting next Monday.

CLEAN - UP OF FIVE POINTS PLAN OF SUPERVISORS

Characterling the Five Points district as a disgrace to San Mateeo county and especially to Redwood City, the board of supervisors at the meeting Monday planned a campaign which it is expected will result in a material improvement in this section which lies just out of Redwood City to the south. The first step in the proposed improvement was taken Monday when a motion was passed by the board calling upon District Attorney Swart to draw up a resolution calling upon County Engineer Kneese to prepare plans and specifications for sewers, curbs, gutters, sidewalks and street work for the entire district.

This action was taken by the supervisors following the report of Sheriff McGovern of bad conditions existing in this section. The inhabitants of this district had always voted down every attempt at a sewer district and other form of improvement, it was stated, and public necessity demanded that some method be used to enforce a general clan-up of the district.

Announcement of this action was made by Supervisor Hickey at the Monday luncheon meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, and met with great applause.

EXCHANGITES TO MEET GOLFERS SCHOOL DIAMOND

The hill-climbing baseballers from Emerald lake who sent the local Kiwanians down to defeat in one of the diamond classics of the age are now lokking for other clubs to conquer and will match bats with the Redwood City Exchangites tomorrow afternoon at the high school diamond. Although it is generally conceeded that the golf bugs of the lake district secured some excellent practice in their game with the Kiwanians, it is thought that they will find scoring more difficult tomorrow.

The Exchange club has an advantage over the defeated Kiwanis team in having in its ranks several bat stars of a more recent vintage than those of the latter team. The proceds of the game tomorrow will be used for the Sequoia high school's annual magazine.

WELFARE SHOP OPENS IN THIEL BUILDING

The Welfare Shop, which was put out of commission temporarily by the fire which almost destroyed the Germania hall building some weeks ago, is again open for business, this time in the Thiel building at the end of Broadway. The shop is maintained as a charitable institution and all profits are used for the San Mateo County Prevenatorium and for the distribution of milk to needy families. Old garments are repaired and sold, as well as other used articles.

Mrs. David Graham, who is in charge of the shop, was assisted in getting moved into the new quarters by the Boy Scouts, who cleaned up the old building and helped to move the quantities of clothing and other articles which were rescued from the fire. Mrs. Graham is very appreciative of the good assistance rendered in this work by the Scouts.

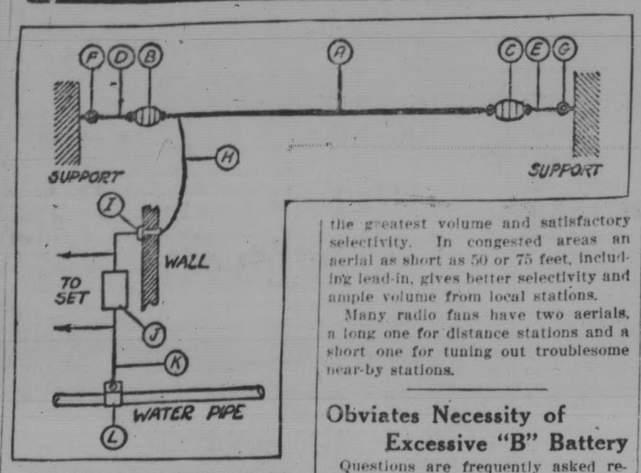
RADIO



How to Erect an Outdoor Aerial.

The outdoor aerial is conceded to be the most efficient in that it transmits to the set a stronger signal than either an indoor aerial or a loop under equal conditions.

The ideal outdoor aerial for receiving is a single wire from 50 to 150 feet long, including lead-in, installed 10 to 20 feet higher than surrounding buildings. The aerial should be erected so that one end comes near a window, to provide a short, direct lead-in.

The aerial should not be near trees, telephone wires or high-tension wires. When necessary to pass a telephone wire the aerial wire should cross as near at right angles as possible. The aerial wire should never cross either above or beneath a power line. When near a power line erect the aerial at right angles to avoid inductance noises.

Supporting wires for the aerial should extend several feet from the supports.

Large porcelain insulators, preferably of the corrugated type, should be used. The lead-in should be as direct as possible, but should be kept from the building a distance of several inches up to the point where it enters the window.

The important features of the outdoor aerial as shown in the diagram are:

A—Aerial wire.
B—Tension insulator.
C—Tension insulator.
D—Supporting wire.
E—Supporting wire.
F—Screw eye.
G—Screw eye.
H—Continuation of A.
I—Lead-in bushing.
J—Lightning arrester.
K—Ground wire.
L—Ground clamp.

At a distance greater than 50 miles from the nearest powerful broadcasting station an aerial of 150 feet, including lead-in, will be found to give the greatest volume and satisfactory selectivity. In congested areas an aerial as short as 50 or 75 feet, including lead-in, gives better selectivity and ample volume from local stations.

Many radio fans have two aerials, a long one for distance stations and a short one for tuning out troublesome near-by stations.

Obviates Necessity of Excessive "B" Battery

Questions are frequently asked regarding the use of tubes with a high amplification constant. These tubes are primarily designed for use in resistance and impedance amplifiers. We quote a few lines from one of Keith Henney's tube articles in the Radio Broadcast magazine. He writes as follows: "A low-mu tube will not 'load up' a power amplifier unless coupled to it by means of a transformer. For example, the average amplifier to deliver .06 watts power requires at least 9 volts variation on its grid. A tube with a mu of 8 coupled by means of resistance impedance to the amplifier cannot produce a variation of voltage greater than 8 volts and probably not over 6, so that the amplifier will not deliver its rated quota of power. On the other hand, a tube with a mu of 20, or a tube with a mu of 5 coupled by means of a 2:1 transformer, can easily produce the desired change in input voltage. High-mu tubes can be used as detectors and hence are useful in vacuum tube voltmeters. Their use in resistance and impedance amplifiers make the latter practical without increasing the 'B' battery voltage beyond reason. It must be said here that the mu of such tubes is not the only important constant. The plate impedance must be considered and, like all other tubes, the usefulness of high-mu tubes increases as their impedance decreases.

"In this question it must be remarked that tubes of 1926 differ from those of 1925 in the fact that their plate impedance is less. This is due to the use of better filament wire which has a higher electron efficiency. This low impedance, while it makes good amplifiers, causes trouble when the tubes are used in sets that have been neutralized for high impedance tubes. It is well known that less inductance is required in the plate circuit of low impedance tubes to make them oscillate than is the case with high impedance tubes. On the other hand, once these newer tubes are neutralized, the voltage amplification and power output are increased."

FOREFATHERS OF RADIO

By GEORGE LEWIS
of The Crosley Radio Corporation.

While wireless telegraphy soon became quite well established, communication across the Atlantic ocean being proved practical as early as 1901, it remained for an American to make the developments which made radio telephony possible. Lee DeForest was that American. He developed the "audion" radio tube, now in almost universal use as a detector and amplifier of radio signals, and as a generator of oscillations at the transmitting station.

Due to certain technical difficulties, it was impossible to send voice by radio from transmitting stations using the old Marconi equipment. The radio tube as developed for power purposes, supplied a current, however, which could be used as a carrier for voice and music.

As developed for receiving purposes, the radio tube may be used as a detector, replacing the crystal of Picard and the coherer of Marconi's apparatus as a means of making the received current capable of operating headphones. Additional tubes may be used as amplifiers, their action being that of relays, releasing current from local batteries when acted upon by the signal. Thus the typical radio set of today employs a detector tube, together with one or more additional tubes as amplifiers.

It is customary to distinguish between tubes used to amplify the current before it passes through the detector and those used to amplify it after it passes through the detector by calling the former "radio-frequency amplifiers" and the latter "audio-frequency amplifiers."

How to Tell Whether Receiver Is at Fault

Noise and distortion are inexcusable faults, but it is well to remember it isn't always the fault of the receiving set. Background noise which can be heard under the voice, as well as certain classes of distortion, are sometimes actually transmitted and there is little you can do to get away from it. This can be checked up by listening in to one or two other stations. If the signals come through clean-cut and free from noise, rest assured your set is O. K. and the broadcasting station at fault.

What Causes Frying Noises in Your Set

Two years ago there were few receivers in use using more than five tubes. Today, however, the six or nine tube sets are in very general use and naturally use up considerable battery current. Take a regular six to nine tube receiver using storage battery tubes and you have a drain of from 15 to 40 milliamperes of "B" battery current and from 1½ to 2 amperes on your "A" battery. The natural result is that batteries do not have a very long life and if they are allowed to get very low will cause all kinds of noises and very poor reception.

On all receivers of five tubes or more a voltmeter that will give a reading of both "A" and "B" batteries is valuable. This enables you to check up the condition of the batteries in a few seconds, giving you positive information of their condition. If you use dry cells for both "A" and "B" batteries, a voltmeter is needed more than ever.

Sometimes one or two of the cells in a "B" battery will go dead, causing your receiver to develop drying, hissing and crackling sounds. If your set has been working all right, then gradually begins to lose volume and get noisy, test your batteries before you do anything else. If a 45-volt "B" battery shows less than 37 volts, throw it away and use a new one.

Keep the terminals of the "A" battery free from corrosion. Sometimes the "A" battery is put away in a place where it is rarely seen, and in course of time the terminals will corrode. Keep them clean and tight and your receiver will give you better service.

An Invisible Search

The ship, the Silver Wave, long overdue, and thought to be lost in the North Pacific, was recently located by a radio search and found to be safe and sound in an Alaskan port.

A Suggestion

To prevent a wire bulge, or backlash, when unwinding a spool of wire, slip a small ratchet screwdriver in the spool and it can turn only in one direction.

BIG ADDITIONS TO NATIONAL FORESTS

Purchases of 247,067 Acres Approved by Commission Last Year.

Washington.—During the past fiscal year the National Forest Reservation commission approved for purchase 247,067 acres at an average price of $4.80 an acre as additions to the national forests, according to the annual report of the commission. The lands thus authorized for purchase consisted of 248 tracts located in ten different states.

Of the approved lands, 55,867 acres can be classed as forested or partly forested lands on which there are stands of timber containing approximately 123,000,000 board feet of merchantable timber, says the report. The remaining lands consist of 4,655 acres of abandoned farm land, arable land and grass land; 152,633 acres of recently cut-over or not yet restocked to young stands; 24,808 acres restocking to young timber either on cut-over lands or abandoned farm land on which forest conditions are being reestablished, and 9,104 acres of barren or badly burned land, on which, however, forest conditions can be re-established. The report continues:

"During the past year only two tracts were approved for purchase in the White Mountain national forest, but these contained 21,619 acres and are being acquired at an average price of $13.06 per acre. The purchase of these lands will effect much desired consolidations. They contain much valuable timber, which will add to the reserve on this forest. Of the total stand of more than 3,200 feet per acre on this land, more than half of it is soft wood, much of it being material which is suitable for the manufacture of paper stock. The acquisition of this land will bring under government control a large area of forested land located on high slopes of several mountains, most of it so situated as to have great value as protection forests.

"These lands bring the total amount of land the purchase of which has been approved on the White Mountain unit to 462,824 acres. The lands which have been acquired are, as a rule, well consolidated for administration and for protection against fire. The effectiveness of the fire control on this unit during the past year is shown by the fact that the total area of government land burned over did not exceed 326 acres. The results of the policy of the protection of cut-over lands against fire are well shown on this forest, as many badly burned areas are now restocking and give assurance of furnishing another stand of merchantable timber. Cutting of the mature timber is being conducted in such a manner as to insure a renewal of a valuable stand. The timber products which are being sold are furnishing an important part of the timber needs of New England, while the method of cutting which is employed serves to develop the full productivity of the forest.

For Allegheny Forest.

"During the past year 30,025 acres in 31 different tracts were approved for purchase on the Allegheny forest at an average price of $3.54 per acre. This brings the total area acquired and being acquired on this unit to 186,588 acres out of a total of 739,277 acres within the purchase unit. The largest tract consisted of 17,200 acres, which, however, was divided into a number of scattered units. Other less important purchases on this forest consisted of five tracts, each of which has an area of somewhat more than 1,000 acres.

"The lands being acquired on this forest consist very largely of cut-over tracts, but are well stocked to young timber, and for this reason they offer high investment potentialities. Notwithstanding occasional fires these young stands, as a rule, are of good density. They consist largely of beech, birch and maple in the northern portion of the forest, and of chestnut and oak in the southern part. The lands so far approved for purchase on this unit are still scattered. The purchase policy should be carried forward with the main objective of effecting consolidation, since government ownership is as yet confined to less than 30 per cent of the total area of the forest.

"For many years prior to their acquisition by the federal government the lands now embraced in the purchased national forests suffered severely from repeated forest fires. Some small areas, of course, escaped unscathed, but in the main the annual fire damage was very high, and in many sections the mountain woods were almost 10 per cent burned over each year. By the mountain people woods fires were quite widely held to be necessary and beneficial and were encouraged, or at least considered as entirely unavoidable and therefore to be expected each season. At the time of purchase, too, these new national forests were largely isolated, inaccessible areas, rugged and difficult in topography, and devoid of anything like adequate systems of communication and transportation to serve as a basis for a plan of protection against fire.

"Nevertheless, the forest service launched agressively into this most essential task of providing the new public forests the protection from fire without which not much else in the way of forestry practice could be hopefully attempted. New protective organizations were built up on each forest, lookouts established, systematic patrol initiated, roads and trails pushed into the interiors of the acquired blocks, fire tools and food caches for suppression crews located at convenient points, and telephone systems developed so that fires might be quickly reported and steps to suppress them promptly taken.

"With the areas of the forests increased by new purchases almost annually, and in the face of constant uncertainty as to the future and ultimate end of purchase work within the established areas engendered by dependence upon annual and fluctuating purchase appropriations, the task of perfecting the system of protection against fire has perhaps been unusually difficult. The objective in this task is to develop a fire-protection system which will insure that the annual acreage loss by fire will not exceed one-tenth of 1 per cent of the total area of government land under protection.

Fires of Human Origin.

"The most regrettable feature of the forest fire record in the eastern national forests is that the fires are practically all of human origin. Campers, railroads, slash burning and steam sawmills annually contribute their quota of fires, but by far the greater number are directly attributable to deliberate woods burning based sometimes upon malice but usually upon ignorance or mistaken theories as to the effect of fires upon forest and forage production.

"The co-operation of all forest users is aggressively sought with a view to a solution of the fire problem by preventing fires from starting and by promptly reporting any fire which is discovered. The degree to which such co-operation in fire protection on the part of the local people can be developed varies with the different forests, since in some regions the number of forest dwellers or near-by forest dwellers is greater than in others. Also the willingness to play an aggressive public-spirited part in fire protection varies greatly.

"A notable example of splendid co-operation is found on the Shenandoah forest in Virginia. The thrifty farmers of that region were quick to see the destruction visited upon the timbered lands annually by forest fires, and have responded admirably to the pleas of forest officers for aid and detection of forest fires. Many fires occurring near the homes of farmers are promptly detected and suppressed by the farmers and the ranger then advised. An ideal system of citizen co-operation has been built up on the Shenandoah, and this system is followed on all forests where at all possible.

"In some unprogressive regions a very difficult situation is encountered. The people living within or near the forests do not yet recognize or appreciate the beneficial effects of forest-fire prevention, and they not only do not co-operate with the protection forces but are directly responsible for the annual recurrence of numerous fires. The situation thus presented is one of extreme difficulty, but it is vigorously attacked along the line of law improvement and enforcement, coupled with a systematic campaign of public education and publicity.

"The solution of the fire problem in the purchased forests lies largely in this serious task of breaking down a local public sentiment which for generations has passively accepted or positively encouraged woods burning and of developing in its place a widespread knowledge of the need for and beneficial results of fire prevention which will translate itself into united public support of the protection idea. This calls for a well-planned, comprehensive, and sustained educational or publicity effort, and the facilities of the forest service for carrying on such a campaign should be extended to meet this need adequately."

Women Give Medals to Faithful Servants

Berlin.—"Pour le merite" medals for domestic servants who hold records for long and faithful service with one employer are now offered by the League of Patriotic Women's Clubs of Germany, which believes that household employees are just as much entitled to decorations as members of other professions.

Seventeen candidates nominated by their respective mistresses recently were summoned to the league's clubrooms here, where each received a silver medal which was pinned on by a leader of Berlin society. Among the successful candidates were maids, cooks, governesses and butlers who had served the same employers for periods ranging from ten to forty years. In addition to the medals they also received "honor letters of recommendation" intended to insure them employment if they ever lose their present positions.

TO SEEK RECORDS HIDDEN BY COOK

Concealed in Alaska More Than 100 Years Ago by Englishman.

Anchorage, Alaska.—Efforts are being made by boatmen plying Cook inlet to locate records deposited by Captain Cook hundreds of years ago on Point Possession, a tableland jutting into the upper inlet.

It is believed these are in the hands of members of the old Russian colony about Ninilchik, or were preserved by the natives following their discovery of the stone monument erected by Cook on the occasion of his first visit to the large waterway bearing his name.

Capt. George Howe, Sr., one of the oldest skippers in Alaskan waters, gives the legend narrated to him by an old Indian chief telling of Cook's historic visit about as follows:

First View for Natives.

Captain Cook brought his ship to anchor near Kenai. It was the first time the aborigines had ever beheld a sailing vessel. They decided to send one man out in his birch canoe to reconnoiter the strange craft, to ascertain if its mission was hostile or friendly. He was instructed to give a signal with his paddle if hostile.

When the native came close to the schooner, Captain Cook, by signs, prevailed on him to come aboard, where he was shown piles of trade goods and finally dressed out in fancy clothes. He was made to understand that all the Indians could have such things and others in exchange for furs.

When the Indian returned to shore he was a marvel to behold, and was pressed for explanations. He conveyed the invitation to trade and the Indians loaded their canoes with fine furs and barter began. Bale after bale of costly sea otter, beaver, marten, mink and other furs that today would command a king's ransom, were taken out to the schooner and swapped for goods. Several days were consumed in the transactions.

Hid His Records.

At the conclusion of the trading, Captain Cook sailed to Point Possession, disembarked and erected a large stone cairn, in which he deposited records of his voyage and experience. For years this monument stood and was visited by many Indians. It was cherished as a memento of the white man's first visit.

Then the tides began to rip at the forelands, cutting away the bank. To save the records they were removed and taken to what is now Ninilchik, where they were handed down from chief to chief for more than a century, and then disappeared.

The Indian chief believed they eventually came into possession of the earlier Russians who escaped from serfdom and settled on the inlet.

Nothing is left of the monument. Except for the hazy memory of location held by the older Indians there is nothing to mark the spot where the great explorer first cast anchor in Cook inlet.

Declares Crow Is Not as Black as Painted

Washington.—The crow is not as black as he is painted, in the opinion of the Department of Agriculture, and it recommends that farmers inflict the death penalty on them only in extreme cases. Sprouting corn is only one item of a varied crow menu, which includes many insects, the department states. A trap has been invented which will really catch the wary crows, the department asserts, recommending its use or the employment of warnings to the feathered pirates where they are too numerous.

The utility of the bat as a mosquito exterminator has been held by the Department of Agriculture to be rather doubtful. This flying mammal relishes mosquitoes, but the Mexican free-tailed variety, which has a potentially valuable appetite, won't colonize satisfactorily.

Some cities in the South have gone so far as to build and furnish special "bat-belfries" as an inducement for them to settle down and enter the mosquito exterminating industry, but the free apartments peristently remain vacant.

Hawaiian Girl of 7 Saves 2 From Sea

Hilo, T. H.—Violet Kauka, seven years of age, Hawaiian girl, has been hailed here as a community heroine following the rescue of her younger sister and a playmate who had drifted out to sea in a rowboat.

The two children were playing in the boat and did not notice that it started to drift away from shore. The servant girl in a neighboring beach residence first saw the predicament and started for help. In the meantime the Hawaiian youngster stripped off her clothing and plunged in for the rescue. She successfully negotiated the quarter-mile swim, seized the rope, and towed the children to safety.

Violet learned to swim at the age of five.

LIGHTKEEPER'S DAUGHTER SHOWS HERSELF HEROINE

Girl Marooned for Three Days and Nights Manages to Keep Beacons Blazing.

London.—A story of a girl's heroism in a lighthouse during a storm came from the Isle of Wight.

The light in St. Helen's lighthouse, near Cambridge, was kept flashing for three nights by the fourteen-year-old daughter of the lighthouse-keeper, Langtan. The girl was marooned there one recent afternoon without food, except one loaf of bread and a small piece of cake, but she carried out her father's duties valiantly.

Laptan and his wife in the afternoon rowed ashore in a rough sea to fetch food and oil to the lighthouse, says the Daily Mail. While they were ashore the sea rose in its fury, and, notwithstanding several attempts made in a lifeboat and motor boat, the father and mother were unable to return to the beacon.

Aside from anxiety for his daughter, left alone in the lighthouse with scarcely any food, Langtan worried as to whether she would realize the necessity to light the lamp, which is one of the most important along the coast. Great was his relief when punctually the light beamed and remained flashing throughout the night.

The gale raged all the next day, making vain the attempts of the lifeboat men and fishermen to take the keeper back. Again night fell, and again the light shone at the appointed hour. As time passed the anxiety of the parents deepened; they pictured the girl as hungry, and perhaps frightened and going without sleep.

They and the girl, however, were doomed to continue the ordeal, for the following day the gale was worse and passage across the three miles of raging seas was impossible.

The third night came, and again the light gleamed forth at the proper hour, as if the lighthouse-keeper himself had been there at his task. Not until five o'clock in the afternoon did the seas abate sufficiently to enable the parents to return. They reached the lighthouse in a motor boat. This was so badly buffeted by the waves that the crew did not venture to return to the mainland.

As the flash worked regularly while Mr. and Mrs. Langtan were ashore, it was evident that the girl kept awake at night and wound every four hours the clockwork apparatus which turns the light.

Red Flag Ousts Union Jack in London Borough

London. — Bermondsey, a London borough, largely inhabited by working people, has decided to fly the Red flag over its town hall instead of the Union Jack, thus following the example of its sister borough, Battersea. The town councilors, most of whom belong to the Labor party, have decided that the new Red flag will show the arms of the borough in the upper left-hand quarter.

J. A. W. Douglas, secretary of the council, said no disrespect was intended toward the Union Jack. There is a growing tendency for boroughs to fly their own flags, and as the old Union Jack was worn out, Bermondsey decided to buy a new Red flag.

Is Amalgamation Wise?

THERE is a certain amount of discrepancy between the attitude of some of the officials of San Francisco, who in speaking of the agitated question of annexation seem to adopt an attitude that the matter is of little inerest to them but is of great interest to the people of this district and the accounts of some of the city papers, in which every thing which would tend to this end is magnified out of recognizability. Whoever apposes the amalgamation of this county with San Francisco, is, if we credit some of the published reports, "a mercenary politician." On the other hand all who are in favor of the proposition would appear to be a "leading realtor of the peninsula."

Now we have never aspired to be a "mercenary politcian" but for all that we must be shown the advantage of such a move before we will favor it. For sixty-nine years this county has managed to paddle its own canoe without the assistance of San Francisco, and while it would be a comparatively easy matter to join with San Francisco and accept the responsibilities along with some of the shady advantages of the big city, it would be virtually impossible to undo the thing if it turned out to be a mistake.

Back before 1856, if we remember correctly, this county was a part of San Francisco but was at that time divorced from San Francisco because the officials of that city thought that the expense of running this part of the county was greater than the taxes which they could get out of it. This part, which was considered the unproductive end of their county, was cut off and thrown upon its own resources. And today San Francisco is anxious to get this district back, now that it is one of the best sections of the state and contains millions of dollars of taxible property. We do not believe that it is a matter of change of heart on the part of San Francisco, but that the reason for the change of attitude must be that the greater city now sees a chance of obtaining more money from the county than it will have to pay.

GOOD NEWS

THE first tangible result of the campaign made last year by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce to secure government aid in the development of the local harbor was received this week in a letter to President E. B. Hinman of that organiation. The letter was from the secretary of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce and contained a copy of a telegram to the president of that organization from Congressman Mrs. Julius Kahn. The telegram was as follows:

"Redwood City project survey ordered by board of engineers. Favorable recommendation received here for preliminary examination of San Francisco harbor."

This is probably the best news for Redwood City which has ever been received here. It indicates that the project of deeping and developing the local harbor has received the favorable action of the war department and has been favorably recommended to the Rivers and Harbors committee of the House by the board of engineers. A survey will now be made by the government and then as President Hinman stated it, "We will have something to shoot at."

Nothing is more important to the development of this city than an adequate plan of harbor development. Growth, whether in industries or shipping depends upon this development and growth of our residential districts depends in a large measure upon our industries.

The fact that the government has become interested in our situation is one of the most encouraging facts in our community growth, and great credit is due to those men in the chamber of commerce who, by presistent work, have made this a verity. E. B. Hinman is especially to be commended for the part which he has taken in bringing about this happy situation. It is now for the people of Redwood City to awaken to the opportunities which this development makes possible, and to back the chamber of commerce, the government, or any other agency which will help to further this proposition.

The biggest and best step in the right direction in meeting the problem behind the prison bars would be made by taking prisons out of the hands of politicians. If this were done, criminals and many more near-criminals would be redeemed for society instead of being destroyed for right living and losing their places as law-abiding citizens.—Kiwanis Magazine.

The value of a dollar cannot be entirely measured by what it will buy. Its purchasing power is greater at times than at others. The really valuable dollar is the emergency dollar which you have laid aside so that you may not be deprived of certain opportunities which may arise. BROADWAY ISSUE PASSED AT CITY ELECTION

That the vote received by the propositino to bond the Town of Redwood City for $30,000 for the purpose of extending Broadway was sufficient to pass the issue was the statement of City Attorney Mansfield before the board of trustees at their meeting Monday evening. The votes of the election were canvassed by the board at the time and the bond issue was declared passed.

It was at first thought that the issue had been defeated, as it was thought that in order to have passed it would have received two thirds of all of the ballotts cast. Although the proposition received more than two thirds of all votes of those who voted at all on the proposition, it did not receive quite two thirds of the entire roll.

It has been decided by Attorney Mansfield and other attorneys, however, that the law regards every bond election as a special election, whether or not the same ballotts be used as are used at a municipal election, and that those who voted on the trustees and did not signify their attitude on the bond issue, cannot be held to have voted on the bond issue. The bonds, therefore, were declared to have been passed by a vote of 1037 against 497, more than the necessary two-thirds required to pass it.

The bonds for the enlargement of the city hall were declared defeated, the vote being 884 to 588.

INCORPORATION ISSUE DEFEATED AT MENLO PARK

The long drawn fight for incorporation which has agitated the citizens of Menlo Park for the past two years came to an end Monday, when the citizens of that community defeated the proposition at the ballot by 29 votes. A large vote was cast and considerable interest was shown in the matter. The final vote showed 200 for incorporation and 229 against it.

The fight for incorporation started more than two years ago, when a petition was filed calling upon the supervisors to call an election. It was found, however, that a similar petition had been filed by the citizens of Atherton a few hours previous and that much of the same territory was included. Preference was given to the prior petition and an election was held at Atherton. That town was incorporated.

Later the people of Menlo Park filed a second petition with the boundaries amended to exclude that land which had been incoporated in Atherton. At the request of the owners of property included in his petition, a large part of it was excluded by the supervisors, and rather than try to incorporate with the reduced territory, the proponents took the matter to court. A decision of Judge Buck sanctioned the action of the supervisors and the proponents then asked that the supervisors call an election for the incorporation of the remaining territory. This was done, with the result that last Monday was set for the date of the election. The result was as given above.

Several candidates stood for election if the town were incorporated and the results of the vote were as follows:

"COHENS AND KELLYS" TO PLAY AT SEQUOIA

Aaron Hoffman's famous stage play, "Two Blocks Away" has been made into a photoplay by Universal and is the feature at the Sequoia Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, April 26 and 27.

"The Cohens and Kellys" is the title of the screen adaptation, directed by Harry Pollard, whose mastery of mirth is held largely responsible for the popularity of Reginald Denny, whom he has directed in many pictures. Charlie Murray, George Sidney and Vera Gordon have the featured roles in the east which also includes Kate Price, Jason Robards, Olive Hasbrouck, Nat Carr, Mickey Bennett and Bobby Gorcon.

POOR BUT PROUD; HE'S "A SOCIAL CELEBRITY"

Imagine a situation like this. Adolphe Menjou in his latest picture for Paramount, "A Social Celebrity," which is due at the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, April 28-29, enacts the part of a small town barber who arrives in New York, and invests his whole fortune in an outfit of smart clothes.

Episode two shows our hero at the apartment of a society youth, who is very much impressed when he sees the sprucely clad gentleman who has arived to shave him. Thinking to amuse himself, he persuades Menjou to pose as a foreign Count "just for tonight." So, much against his better judgment he is presented at a society function as Count Havare de Maxin. He then proceeds to fall in love with the most beautiful girl in the room. And she doesn't try to discourage his attentions. With the passing of time, he gets deeper and deeper into the social swamp.

What can possibly happen to save him? What would you do if you were in his boots? Interesting and amusing; isn't it?

That's the basic theme around which "A Social Celebrity" is built. Adolphe Menjou has the finest role of his career; and is surrounded with an excellent cast headed by Chester Conklin and Louise Brooks.

COUNTY VOTES $1000 FOR INJURED WOMAN

Mrs. Lillian Maynard, a resident of East Palo Alto will receive $1000 from this county because of injuries received at the Community hospital. Mrs. Maynard was at the hospital for a minor operation and was under the anaesthetic, when by the carelessness of a nurse, who has been dismissed from the institution, she received severe burns. A hot water bottle was left in contact with one of Mrs. Maynard's toes, in such a way that by the time she had recovered from the aenaesthetic the toe was burned to the bone. A long period of severe suffering and confinement to the hospital resulted.

The accident was in no way due to the negligence of Dr. Baer, who is charge of the institution, and in stating her case to the board, which Mrs. Maynard did in a letter, she spoke in very high terms of the hospital and of the treatment she received. The nurse responsible for the injury was dismissed and Mrs. Maynard given the best of treatment.

The board Monday voted to pay Mrs. Maynard's claim for $1,000 and remit all hospital bills in connection with her case.

Cleaning Without Odor by the F. Thomas Process

Our many years of experience has taught us that it is impossible to do perfect cleaning with cheap, inferior methods. That is why we found it necessary to invest nearly $500,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an expert organization to do the quality of work demanded by our customer.

With the "F. THOMAS PROCESS we do not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.

Raw gasoline — the kind that you buy to you automobile — is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. It is little better than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening gasoline smell in your clothes.

HEAR MISSION BELLS IN FAR AWAY CHICAGO

Even by the wildest stretches of imagination, Father Junipera Serra, who founded the De Toloso Mission in San Luis Obispo in the year 1772, would never have considered the possibility of the chime of that Mission being heard 2000 miles away. In fact even the most credu'ous of today would be wont to believe that the bells pealing in San Luis Obispo could be heard in Chicago.

However, according to J. D. Worthington, manager of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. here, this recently happened. A guest, staying in one of the leading hotels in San Luis Obisop, was talking to Chicago by long distance telephone service and during the conversation the chimes of the Mission nearby began to peal

As the sound interfered with the conversation, the guest asked to be excused for a moment to close the window. The Chicago party, hearing the chimes, requested that the window be left open as he enjoyed hearing them and marvelled that they could be heard at such a great distance.

The star in question is making its first personal appearance and is no less a one than Joe Martin, himself, which is one of the features of the Al G. Barnes Big 4 Ring Circus.

Joe is said to be the most valuable animal in all the world, and no less than four persons are constantly engaged looking after Joe's comfort. A specially designed wagon fitted with hot water heat and fans has been provided by the mechanics of the Barnes circus and Joe will lead the life of a real star dring his tour of the United States this year.

A SOUTHERN VIEW OF OUR ANNEXATIONISTS

The recent flare up about amalgamation has caused the Los Angeles Times to bulge forth in the following attempt at sarcasm. The article recalls the lines of Bobby Burns:

"Oh wad some power the giftie us,
To see oursells as ithers see us."

Virtually assured of the consent of San Mateo county to its annexation to San Francisco, the people of the Bay City have just cause to chortle over the acquisition of an area which, though it will not give them much by way of new human residents, will make their fish and gopher population the largest of any municipality in all the wide West.

San Francisco is warranted in the full expression of its civic pride in the fact that wthin its urban limits there will be the largest expanse of lakes mud flats and mountain ranges to be found in any city in the world. The dairy and vegetable growing districts also will constitute new physical features to thrill the proud heart of a city that long has suffered sad deprivation in this respect. Then there are the cornfields, alfalfa pastures, vineyards, prune orchards and redwood groves, to say nothing of the primeval forests of liveoak and the great expanse of chaparral and wild oat cattle range.

These things, in the new and laudable view of San Francisco's leading citizens of what helps to make a city great, are all to the good as distinctive features of urban progress and prestige.

Hooray for San Mateo annexation, and long may the wild oats wave and the wild cattle roam over the great open spaces of San Francisco! Still, some of the old timers in Los Angeles may be pardoned for wiping their glasses to make sure they have read aright and for asking "How do they do it?" For a generation San Francisco has sneered at Los Angeles because the southern city was afflicted with what they called "annexationitis." They said we were trying to annex the whole of the state outside San Francisco just to belabie to boast of a larger population. At every new annexation there were more sneers. Yet now, San Francisco is reaching out to embrace a whole county. In order that San Francisco may be greater there will be one county less in our glorious California.

But we shall not protest. It looks like the awakening of San Francisco, after a generation of semilethargy. San Francisco will enlarge its place in the sun, and annexation will be a distinct advantage for the residents of what now exists, but will soon be only a memory: San Mateo county. Growth in southern California has been marked by the creation of new counties; but in Northern California it is to be found the other way round. In a single annexation San Francisco will embrace more territory than all the annexations have brought to the city of Los Angeles since we started to grow and to annex.

Perhaps Marin county will be the next to fall; and then the municipalities on the eastern side of the bay will have to dig in to keep from being dragged across and joined to Greater San Francisco.

San Francisco is no longer asleep. It has departed from tradition. It has caught the progressive spirit of the new day; and the new competition will offer a spur to Los Angeles to continue to forge ahead. In one generation Los Angeles has grown from a population less than half that of San Francisco to one about double that of the northern municipality. It is for the new generation to maintain that lead; and those into whose hands the destinies of our community are passing must remember that what one generation has won through thrift and industry another through luxury, idleness and waste can fritter away.

WILBUR COX

Synopsis.—Idly fishing Hermanos creek, in California, Caleb Warner, civil engineer, and a New Englander, is witness of the end of a coyote pulled down by two wolfhounds, urged on by a girl rider. Admiring the hounds, he introduces himself, and learns her name is Clinton. With western hospitality she invites him to the ranch to meet her father. At the Clinton home Warner learns his new friend's name is Betty. He is welcomed by her father, Southern Civil war veteran and owner of Hermanos valley. Warner tells them something of his ambitions and his feeling that he is destined to be a "Water-Bearer." In the town of Golden Warner shares an apartment with his old Columbia college chum, Ted Baxter, carefree and somewhat dissipated youth, only child of his widowed mother, who controls the family fortune.

"There's Wilbur Cox," he said. "That's a Big Business crowd. Morse, on the right of Cox, is head of the Lumber ring, then comes Towle, president of the Sundown railroad. Marlin's next, he opens up big tracts for colonist development. Lawler is an oil magnate and the last one is Winton, manager of the Golden Light and Power company. They come close to running Golden and a good share of the state as well. I don't know how their bank balances stand, but you can bet that the six of them represent several times that number of million dollars in active circulation with their interests."

Caleb regarded Cox with special attention. He knew that he owned big land holdings, controlled rich mines and was the president and mainspring of the Crystal Springs Water company that supplied Golden with its commercial and civic measure of the vital fluid.

He saw a man who might have been anywhere from fifty to sixty, tall, spare, with close-trimmed hair gray above the ears, clean-shaven, with a fine forehead and a well-shaped skull, a projecting nose, keen gray eyes, a genial mouth and a firm chin. He told many of the stories that met with the greatest laughter, for the group was a care-free one, for the moment at least. Their luncheon was almost over and, when Cox rose at its conclusion, he did so with an ease that spoke of muscles still in prime condition. If Caleb had wanted to sum up the man in one crisp word he would have chosen the adjective "fit."

"No need to hurry," Baxter said. "The old boy's son is coming up this afternoon from Los Angeles and I know Cox has arranged for a dinner here tonight. If you can get in right with Cox, Cal, the going should be easy. I can give you the introduction. After that it's up to you. Cox doesn't take me very seriously."

Leaving the dining room, they met Cox alone, coming from the direction of the club's telephone booths. Baxter seized the moment.

"I want a friend of mine to meet you," he said to the older man, speaking with the frank facility that was one of his greatest assets, met by Cox with a sort of half-tolerant geniality. "This is Caleb Warner, one-time classmate of mine at Columbia, civil engineer, following the Star of Empire westward in the hope of hitching his wagon to it. Don't let my friendship with him prejudice you against him. He plays ant to my grasshopper."

Cox smiled as he gripped Caleb's hand cordially enough, giving him a direct glance that, in kindly but determined fashion, seemed to measure him.

"Glad to meet you," he said. "Plenty of room out here for civil engineers. Any specialty?"

"Water," Caleb answered promptly. The eyes of Cox seemed to harden a little, to hold a hint of suspicion at the pat answer that might have been calculated to awaken interest.

"Done much at it?"

"A factory dam or two. One reservoir for town supply. Back East. The rest of my practical experience has been along other lines for the last two years but I am especially interested in water-engineering and the West seemed to be the place."

"Looking for a job?" Cox fired out the questions briskly, all the while covering Caleb with the battery of his eyes.

"For any real opportunity, Mr. Cox."

A servant came up with a salver and presented it to Baxter. He glanced at the filled-in form-message and excused himself.

"You'll pardon me. I'm wanted on the phone. Cox looked after him with a humorous quirk to his mouth.

"There goes the grasshopper," he said. "Now then, these last two years you mentioned? What were you doing? Where were you doing it?"

"Building roads and bridges. Repairing a lot more. Some trench work."

"Ah!" Caleb was sure that a gleam of new interest came into Cox's eyes. "You served over there. Any rank?"

"I came out a first lieutenant." Cox nodded.

"It was a great training ground," he said. "No time wasted there, to my mind. Gave a young man a broader horizon, taught him to handle men. My boy was over there." He hesitated as Baxter came back. "He's due here at five-thirty," he went on. "I imagine you'd get on well together. Better join us at dinner. You too, Baxter."

"Got to excuse me," said Baxter. "Previous appointment. Sorry."

One of the members of the luncheon party had been hovering somewhat impatiently in the background, evidently waiting for Cox. The latter saw him and nodded.

"Got to go now," he said. "See you at five-thirty, Warner, then."

Caleb watched the tall figure as it strode off, energetic, masterful, listening to what the other had to say, dismissing it with an abrupt gesture. He turned to Baxter.

"That man is a fighter," he said.

"You can double that bet. They're all fighters, scrapping for everything in sight, fighting to get it, fighting to hold on to it. That's the essence of Big Business, I take it, everywhere. They have their rules, of course, but they sometimes slip one over beneath the belt, at that. But they've never told the count over Cox. How did he come to invite you to dinner? Not to mention me? I'd fit in there about as well as a goldfish in a shark-pond—not worth gobbling but, if I glittered enough, they might know I was among those present."

"I don't think he took any sudden fancy to me," Caleb answered. "He warmed up a little when he heard I had been across. Thought his boy might like to meet me."

"Of course. I'm a chump, Jack Cox is the apple of his father's eye, all the more so because Pa Cox had good reasons to suppose said apple was worm-eaten. You think I'm inclined to burn the trail. Man, beside Jack Cox I was as a Ford to a Rolls Royce! He was in more mix-ups with wine, women and song than Don Juan ever dreamed of. Compared to him I'm an amateur. Or was. The war changed all that. Jack's come back a changed leopard. Not a spot on him. Following in his dad's footsteps." He broke off abruptly. "How about a little air this afternoon? I think the breeze would favor my fevered brow. I want to be fit for tonight. We'll take the car over on the ferry and run down to San Jose and back."

"Just the two of us?"

"Yes, you double-dyed Puritan, just the two of us, all by our lonelies. Are you on?"

At three o'clock they were bowling south along an almost perfect road when Baxter grudgingly slowed down in obedience to a signboard that informed them they were approaching the town of Paloma.

"I'm feeling much better," he announced. "Want to take the wheel for a while and let me smoke?" They changed seats.

"I've got to trim down on these," Baxter said, lighting his cigarette. "The pump needs repacking," he went on, tapping himself over the heart. "And it can't be done. They turned me down for that. Told me I had a banquet-heart and that the excitement of sticking a Heine might end it. It's the old C and C. Champagne and cigarettes! Jack Cox got in but I stayed out. Made me feel like a slacker."

"Why don't you cut the stuff, Ted?"

"It isn't going to last long enough. At present I prefer the vineyard to the lemon grove. I'm no good at business anyway. I'm a grasshopper and I'll hop till the grass gets too short and things dry up generally."

"This sort of thing you've got on tonight, Ted? Aren't you afraid you'll wind up in some sort of a mess?"

"I'm immune. It's good fun. The girls I travel with know how to take care of themselves. It's a two-sided game. If I met the right girl— Oh, what's the use? You see, Cal, the mater is chipping off a chunk of her principal every year. She flies high herself. If I outlast her, which is doubtful, there won't be much coming to me. I suppose she's right. I've got to marry money, but the girls with money are either too blase, too businesslike or too homely and stupid. No use preaching to me, Cal. You're born an ant and I'm a cicada, which is Californese for grasshopper."

They reached the apartment house at five o'clock and Caleb proceeded to dress circumspectly for the dinner while his friend laid out more sumptuous raiment.

"You'll be home tonight?" asked Caleb.

"I'll be home when the game's over," answered Baxter enigmatically. "This is Saturday night. We may take a little trip to Lake county. Don't bother about me. Off to your business, ant!"

CHAPTER IV

Big Business

Jack Cox turned out so close a replica of his father—less weathered, less bitten by Time and Experience—but nevertheless so evident a chip of the old block, that Caleb almost doubted Baxter's description of him as a reformed wastrel. He had been through the furnace of the war and, whatever of steel had been in him had been tempered, the baser metals burned to slag and discarded. Caleb had seen others in his own division of the fighting game who had stiffened and found their manhood in like fashion.

Caleb liked him from the outset. The man had qualities that he lacked, the same western broadness that Baxter possessed in more volatile fashion. But, though trolleys and water dams seem far apart to the laity, a mutual profession based both of them. Caleb found the preliminary story of Imperial valley vastly interesting and Jack Cox told it well, albeit he had had no hand in those earlier stages of development. It was the tale of the bringing back of an arid sink, once under cultivation by the Indians, of the harnessing of the mighty Colorado, one terrific fight with flood waters and now—cotton fields, and vineyards, wide acres of cantaloupes, horticulture and agriculture in every branch; order, industry, prosperity. Caleb listened with interest and understanding.

"There is only one Imperial valley, perhaps," said Cox, "but there are other deserts with soil just as fertile, waiting only for the magic touch of water. Your end of it—the water end—is the initial move in the game, mine is the last. You play Alpha to my Omega."

"If I get the chance," said Caleb.

"Oh, you'll get it. The chances are everywhere. If a man knows his business, and wants to work at it, there's no trouble about Opportunity. Her knuckles must be raw on the Pacific coast. She knocks unceasingly," laughed Cox.

The Coxes' father and son, appear to be solid folk. Is Caleb Warner's lot to be cast with them?

Old-Time Press Censor of Reactionary Mind

The first Englishman of any distinction to take up journalism as a profession was Sir Roger l'Estrange, who died 221 years ago.

He was an ardent pamphleteer on the epoch of the Restoration, and in 1662 was made "surveyor of the press," the censor of all books and pamphlets and the editor of a monopolistic newspaper, called the Intelligencer.

The reactionaries and die-hards of today would certainly welcome Sir Roger with open arms, for he wrote that the publication of any but the most carefully edited news "makes the multitude too familiar with the actions and counsels of their superiors, too pragmatical and censorious, and gives them not only a wish, but a kind of a colorable light and license to the meddling with the government."

He failed miserably in his attempt to stamp out the freedom of the press—or its early ideal—and when deprived of his monopoly, he himself turned to the publication of an unofficial "catchpenny" sheet, called the Observer.—Chicago Journal.

Had Benefit of Climate

The homes of the ancient Romans were imperishable because they were erected in a climate wherein there was practically no freezing and thawing. The same mortars used in our climate have not been at all successful. Furthermore, the same stones used by the Romans give a comparatively short life in our country. The mortar mostly used by the Romans was a mixture of lime and sand. To this was added some natural occurring ground volcanic rock. This corresponds to what is known as puzzolana, which, as indicated, has not been found satisfactory here.

Gregorian Calendar

The present calendar was adopted in the Sixteenth century, the Julian or old Roman calendar having become greatly erroneous. Luigi Lilas Ghiraldi, frequently called Aloysuis Liiues, a physician, of Verone, projected a plan for amending the Julian calendar, which, after his death was presented by his brother to Pope Gregory XIII. To carry it into execution, the Pope assembled a number of prelates and learned men. In 1577 the proposed change was adopted by all the Catholic princes, and in 1582 Gregory issued a brief abolishing the Julian calendar in all Catholic countries, and introducing in its stead the one now in use, under the name of the Gregorian or reformed calendar, or the "new style," as the other was now called the "old style." The Gregorian calendar was not adopted in England until 1752.

Pugnacious Crayfish

Crayfish are so pugnacious that if two of them are put in the same crate or open pen one will kill the other, or, like the farmer's dog, die barking at the hole. That is why, when the University of Washington shipped a dozen rare specimens from its aquarium in Seattle to the fish pool in New York, the shippers wound up each crayfish in yards of wet cheesecloth. The consignment came through whole and healthy.—Youth's Companion.

STYLES IN AFTERNOON FROCKS; FLARES AND FURS ADORN COATS

WHEN the discourse is of spring and summer styles in coats or suits, one may expect to exhaust the subject after a while and make an end of it. But when the talk is of spring's lovely frocks for summer afternoons, the conversation is simply "continued in our next" indefinitely and will not come to the end of the subject because there is no likelihood of its having an end. One pleasant episode follows another; for now that sheer fabrics and printed silks are established in the mode, designers find in them perpetual inspiration and incentive to vary the styles.

The quaint and almost childish flavor of the youthful frock pictured here, is the result of several style features used to that end. One of them is the very full skirt, with flare insured by the plaited ruffle of taffeta and another is the rather high waistline with its plain silk girdle. The use of plaited taffeta on the sleeves is important and makes them unusual; the long ribbon ties fastened with a brooch, are even more unusual and the neck finish is demure and pretty. Worn with one-strap or plain slippers this frock will subtract years from its wearer.

When designers deal with printed silks, using them alone, or in combination with plain, sheer fabrics, it seems easy for them to turn out chic styles in afternoon dresses. In many of these the little scarf collar and tie cuffs are noted and they are made up in two-piece effects quite as often as in one-piece. There are many apron effects also by which the fashionable fulness is added to the skirt without disturbing the slim lines of the silhouette. These front flounces are plaited in side or box plaits, shirred or cut so that they fall in godets. All the sheer fabrics lend themselves to shirrings, tucks, and little ruffles and these—often aided by fine vestees and collars of lace and net—add to the daintiness and quaint style of charming summer dresses.

This spring's utility coats have a right to point with pride to increased dignity in style, as becomes the most important item in the season's street clothes. They are distinctly different from the regulation sports coats and there is nothing casual or easy-going about them, even when they are made of tweeds or other mannish cloths. Perhaps it is because they must live up to the almost universal touch of soft fur that they make a point of trimness and elegance; but more likely it is the return of the tailored mode to favor that has given them added importance.

Two outstanding style triumphs appear in the two utility coats as shown here. One of these is the coat of smooth-faced cloth that introduces the wide flare in the skirt, achieves a double breasted front, when fastened up, and remembers the becomingness of a side fastening. It proclaims its chic up-to-dateness by these means, but even more than all, in the finishing touch of fur about the collar. Fashion refuses to turn its back on fur but discards its winter furs and turns to summer furs with new interest. In this model the touch of fur is merely decorative and modish.

One would of course expect the plain tweed topcoat to come to the fore in a season of smart tailored styles and the tweed coat is as popular as ever. There are quite a number of novel weaves to give it added interest and it is often united to a smart cape by way of variety and greater warmth. The trim and efficient-looking coat at the right presents huge pockets and straps faultlessly tailored as sufficient and proper decorative features and adds a soft fur collar to prove that nothing else could make a better finish.

Tulle Dance Frocks

The most delightful frocks for the debutante are of tulle, flounced and frilled so that they stand out like the dress of a Spanish dancer. Many combine several different pastel colors with most interesting results.

Colored Covert

Covert cloth for both tailored frocks and suits is much in vogue and comes in shades of violet, blue and green, as well as the familiar tan and gray.

Camouflage Hosiery

The woman who has not trim ankles nowadays can at least trim her hosiery purchases to make them look smaller. The newest camouflage to that end have a V-shaped heel of contrasting color, the points of which extend on either side of the back seam.

Taffeta Trimmings

Taffeta forms some of the most fascinating trimming of the season made into rosettes, ruffles and bandings.

A Slide for Life

One day last summer as a couple was enjoying an automobile trip thrqugh the southern part of the state, with its elevated hills and deep ravines, it was in wonder that they noticed a man slowly climbing out from beneath a clump of thickly-foliaged shrubs.

Immediately they stopped their auto and anxiously inquired of the stranger, "What do you think you are doing?"

Soon, calmly gazing at the hill above him, he smilingly replied, "This is the fourth time I've fallen off my farm today."—Indianapolis News.

Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers was ridiculing the proposed campaign to abolish short skirts.

Mrs. Rogers added with a laugh:

"I heard a story the other day about a lady who entertained a dozen modern young men and girls at her country house during the holidays. Well, when that gay dozen left for home there were 32 engagements among the party."

New Use for Masks

Gas masks of the type that protected soldiers during the World war were pressed into service by a crew of workers in London while hunting leaks in the city gas mains. The hazard of the job was increased by the necessity of working in deep trenches where vapors had insufficient chance to escape in case flows of considerable pressure were encountered. With the masks, the workers were able to make a thorough search.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mussolini Shot in Nose by Eccentric English Woman; Wets Arraign Dry Act.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ANOTHER piece of good luck for Benito Mussolini, the redoubtable premier and dictator of Italy! Having just addressed the international congress of surgeons in the capitol of Rome, he was about to step into his automobile when Violet Albina Gibson, member of an eccentric family of Irish nobility, fired a small pistol at him. The bullet struck him in the nose, piercing both nostrils, but the wound was so trifling that Mussolini resumed his office work after it was dressed, and next day began his journey to Tripoli with the battle fleet. The assassin, who is an elderly woman, was rescued from the angry people by the police. Her motive has not been revealed. She is the sister of Baron Ashbourne and her relatives say she is half mad.

The immediate result of the attack was a great outbreak of enthusiasm for Mussolini by the Fascisti in Rome and other cities. The offices of several opposition newspapers were sacked, despite the premier's order that there be no acts of vengeance. The "duce" is now even more of a national hero than before, if that is possible. His departure for Tripoli was attended with great pomp. The fleet accompanying him was made up of a division of battleships, destroyers and submarines, together with large numbers of airplanes and seaplanes. Aboard the flagship Conte di Cavour he received the new directorate of the Fascisti and gave out the details of the party program for the change of Italy from a parliamentary to a syndicalist state. In his address he declared the Fascists had won their battle at home but that there was now the graver battle with foreign countries. It was natural that all countries upholding the principle of fraternity without real brotherhood of equality, without peace or liberty, and without independence would coalesce against Italy. The premier said he foresaw an attempt economically to isolate Italy, but he shouted, "We will win, because we have 3,000,000 youths ready."

Not a day passes without further evidence of the implacable determination of the Fascisti to have their own way. Tuesday they engaged in a pitched battle with their opponents in the province of Palermo, Sicily, and drove them into the mountains. In Naples the Jewish lawyer for the widow of Giacomo Matteoti, Sig Modigliani, was seriously wounded by a Fascist mob. Matteoti was the Socialist deputy who was kidnaped and murdered on June 10, 1924, by a Fascist group. John Amendola, the last important leader of the opposition to Mussolini, died in Cannes as the result of a beating he received from a Fascist mob in Italy several months ago.

Unconfirmed stories sent over by foreign correspondents tell of an attack by Fascisti in Venice on American sailors from the four destroyers that were there. This was due to resentment against the holding up of the Italian debt settlement in the senate. The navy officials in Washington said they had not heard of the event, but the destroyers left Venice suddenly.

EVERY ONE in the country, be he wet or dry, is following with interest the senate committee hearings on the bills for amendment or repeal of the Volstead act. Last week was given over to the wets, and they made the most of their opportunity, under the leadership of Senators Bruce and Edge and with the assistance of counsel for various wet organizations. General Andrews, chief prohibition enforcement official of the government, was the first witness. He told at length of the problems encountered by his forces and of their plans for more efficient work; of the amazing effrontery of the bootleggers and alcohol redistillers and the crookedness of many druggists and physicians. He said that captures made by his agents show that 98 per cent of the whisky Americans are drinking today is fixed, doped, poisoned, split, and otherwise adulterated.

At one point in his testimony General Andrews blamed "politics, the churches, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Anti-saloon league" for the presence in the federal prohibition enforcement organization of men either corrupt or stupid and inefficient. He was not, of course, a friendly witness for the wets, and declared that with more legislation and additional forces he believed he could finally control the situation.

United States District Attorney Buckner of New York followed with disclosures of the enormous quantities of industrial alcohol, much of it poisonous, diverted to the bootleggers and to the stomachs of the people. He estimated the total to be 60,000,000 gallons a year. Other parts of his testimony may be summarized thus:

Twelve hundred drug stores in New York city are selling 480,000 gallons of whisky a year, and that is precisely twice as much as could legally be sold if all the prescription blanks which the law allows the 5,100 physicians in that area were legitimately used.

Analysis of 50,000 samples of bootleg whisky captured by federal agents in New York city in two years showed the captures not to be whisky at all, but redistilled denatured alcohol with traces of the poisonous denaturing fluid still in it.

So large and so flagrant is the diversion of industrial alcohol from legitimate channels that now it is being bootlegged into Canada, where the tax on alcohol is very high.

Thirteen months ago, when Buckner took office as United States district attorney for the Southern district of New York, he found the fifth floor of the federal building in New York city a seething mob of bartenders, waiters, liquor peddlers, petty bootleggers, fixers, and bond sharks openly trafficking with justice. They tried to bribe the jurymen even in the building.

Alfred J. Talley, former judge of the court of general sessions, New York city, swore that his court experience convinces him that prohibition is "the greatest single menace confronting the United States and the greatest cause of lawlessness among the most lawless people in the world," and that "for every saloon abolished three speakeasies have sprung up."

Among the many other witnesses heard were Hudson Maxim, Congressman Vare of Pennsylvania, Dr. William C. Woodward of Chicago, representing the American Medical association and Anton J. Cermak, speaking for a delegation of Chicagoans.

CORN-BELT leaders in Washington announce that the cotton growers of the South will support the surplus control bill designed to raise the prices of farm products on the domestic market above the export market price, and believe they will overcome the opposition of the administration to the measure. Secretary of Agriculture Jardine has been drafting a bill which makes some important concessions to the demands of the corn growers. His measure will provide for the creation of a farm board to deal with the surplus problem, as proposed by the farm organizations, but will omit any provision for collecting equalization fees from the producers. The corn belt would finance the price-boosting operations from a $250,000,000 revolving fund advanced by the government. Secretary Jardine will not provide for a revolving fund, but is working out a plan for a loan either by the government or private capital for financing operations in the orderly marketing of surplus products.

ACCORDING to a report of the Department of Agriculture, the farm population of the United States decreased nearly half a million during 1925. It estimates the number of persons living on farms January 1, 1926, to have been 30,655,000, compared with 31,134,000 January 1, 1925. The estimated net movement away from farms last year amounted to 901,000 persons, but there was an estimated excess of farm births over farm deaths amounting to 422,000, which reduced the loss due to cityward movement to 479,000. The estimated decrease in farm population in 1924 was 182,000.

ARGUMENTS in the Brookhart-Steck contest occupied considerable time in the senate last week and it did not appear that an early decision was likely. There was a report that President Coolidge had intimated to Senator Butler, chairman of the Republican national committee, that in his opinion the majority report of the elections committee, which recommended the seating of Steck, Democrat, should be approved. If this is done it is a certainty that Brookhart will oppose Senator Cummins for the nomination in the next Republican primaries. That might result in the election of a Democrat, and the prospect is rather worrying the Republicans.

PROSPECTS are good for settlement of the Tacna-Arica dispute between Peru and Chile in accordance with a plan submitted to the representatives of the two republics by Secretary of State Kellogg. The nature of the proposals was not made public except that they would be substituted for the plebiscite. Ambassadors Cruchaga of Chile and Velardi of Peru both expressed the hope that the new negotiations would succeed.

RAUOL PERET, finance minister of France, won a big victory when the parliament adopted his measures after a week's consideration. Figures issued Tuesday showed that France's budget was balanced for the first time since the beginning of the World war, without including of the country's 52 per cent of the reparations paid by Germany under the Dawes plan.

NEGOTIATIONS for peace in Morocco on the basis of autonomy for the Riffians were proceeding nicely in Paris when a semiofficial announcement from Madrid virtually ended them. This was to the effect that Spain would not accept the terms offered by Abd-el-Krim. Consequently a strong French offensive in the near future is predicted unless Krim is willing to consider new terms offered by France and Spain.

In Syria the French are still fighting the Druses, and a recent dispatch says Prince Hamad Atrash, son of Sultan el Atrash, leader of the tribesmen, was killed in battle at Maarba.

FOUR hundred men and women, fugitives from Russia, met in Paris in the first Pan-Russian congress of emigrants and exiles and laid plans for an early attempt to win back their country from the Bolshevists. Prof. Peter Strouve was elected president of the congress and roused intense enthusiasm when he called on Grand Duke Nicholas, uncle of the late czar, to become grand chieftain of national Russia, assume command of the army and liberate the country from communist oppression. How all this might be accomplished was considered in secret sessions of the conference.

RELIGIOUS warfare between the Moslems and Hindus in India, always smoldering, has broken out in Calcutta and other cities and the British authorities are having a hard time trying to restore order. Mosques and temples are destroyed and many persons are being killed or wounded in the wild street fighting.

Another cause of anxiety to the British in India is the demand of the nazim of Hyderabad that he be given Berar, which was ceded to the English 150 years ago. The nazim has armed forces and might lead a revolt of other dissatisfied Indian princes. British troops have been concentrated in Secunderabad to keep the nazim quiet.

AIRPLANES from the army of Marshal Chang have been bombing Peking, despite the protests of the foreign diplomats. The real battle for the possession of the city seems to have begun. It is reported there that a coalition has been formed between the forces of Feng Yu-hsiang, Wu Pei-fu and the governors of Shansi and Klangsi provinces for the destruction of the Chili and Shantung armies that are besieging the capital.

Anti-Foreign Feeling Spreading in China

Fort Worth, Texas.—Anti-foreign and anti-Christian feeling in China is strong and is ever increasing, according to Bishop H. A. Boaz, who is here, his former home.

This attitude of the Orient is due, for the most part, he said, to the un-Christian attitude of persons from Christian countries.

Bishop Boaz was sent to the Orient four years ago by the Southern Methodist church to take charge of the work in the field. His official episcopal residence was maintained at Shanghai, China, and Seoul, Korea. His duties extended over these two countries, and Japan and Manchuria as well.

"The Chinese have come to the belief," he said, "that their country has been and is being exploited and that treaties have been formed that have worked, to the detriment of China. Members of their race who have been educated in Christian countries are also inclined to the same opinion.

"Unless we give to China a fair deal, these conditions will continue to exist. In a measure I fully appreciate the attitude of the Chinese and believe they are partly right in their belief.

"This dissension among the military leaders of China right now will not guarantee protection to life and property, and until the country again becomes stable no faction or group of factions can assure peace and happiness to foreigners."

The Kitchen Cabinet

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

Economy and variety may perfectly well go together—the better the cook, the greater the economy. Economy means getting full value for the expenditure, whether it is money or time.

EGG DISHES

As eggs are rich in protein and make a desirable substitute for meat they should be used freely when reasonable in price. As they are, when fresh, without waste, they are not an expensive food.

Eggs With Ham.—Mince one and one-half cupfuls of cold boiled ham and add to two cupfuls of white sauce. Pour into a greased baking dish and break six eggs over it. Dust with paprika and bake until the whites are set. Serve as a luncheon dish.

Asparagus Omelet.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add two of flour, add gradually one cupful of milk and cook until smooth, seasoning with salt and pepper. Separate the yolks and whites of six eggs, add to the beaten yolks one-fourth of a cupful of the white sauce. Beat the whites until stiff and then fold into the mixture. Cook in an omelet pan well greased; finish browning in the oven. Turn out on a platter and garnish with asparagus tips and the remaining white sauce.

Sweet Peppers and Eggs.—Chop two sweet green peppers after removing the white fiber and seeds. Cook slowly in two tablespoonfuls of butter and add one tablespoonful of tomato catsup. Beat six eggs, add two tablespoonfuls of rich cream, two tablespoonfuls of water, and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Scramble the egg mixture in butter and serve on triangles of hot toast.

Cheese Souffle.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour, then add two-thirds of a cupful of water, one-third of a cupful of milk; cook until thick. Add seasonings, two egg yolks beaten, and one cupful of grated cheese. When cool fold in two well-beaten whites and bake in a well-greased baking dish.

Stuffed Eggs.—Cut four hard-cooked eggs into halves lengthwise. Remove the yolks, mash and mix with mayonnaise, chopped parsley, salt and paprika. Add a little onion juice if liked. Refill the whites and fasten with a toothpick.

Food for Convalescents.

There will never come a time when there is not urgent need of intelligent care of food for the convalescent, even when trained nurses and dietitians are plentiful, for the expense must be considered in most homes.

The physician's orders should always be followed and no new food should be introduced without first inquiring as to the wisdom of the change.

The patient's appetite is not always a safe guide and many have lost their lives by being given food they craved. Ignorance is never bliss when feeding the invalid.

Those recovering from a fever have an abnormal appetite, and great tact and care must be used in feeding them.

The liquid diet, which is given for the first food in convalescence, may be so varied that it need not be monotonous.

When beginning a solid diet, care should be taken to have the change very gradual.

Chicken Panada.—Remove the skin and every particle of fat from the breast of a chicken. If the fowl is large, one-half of the breast will be sufficient. Place in a saucepan with enough water to cover and simmer slowly for two hours, or until the meat is very tender. Take it from the broth and cut it into small pieces, then press through a sieve, using a large spoon. Add the broth to the chicken, season with a bit of salt. Add four tablespoonfuls of cream and bring to the boiling point. Serve in a pretty bowl with bits of crisp toast cut into fancy shapes.

Honey Sandwiches.—Boil one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful each of water and orange juice, with two thin shavings of orange rind, until the sirup spins a thread. Add one-half cupful of candied orange peel chopped and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Heat to the boiling point, cool and spread on thin slices of white, nut or raisin bread; cut into fancy shapes. Nice for children's parties.

Eggs in Spinach.—Line ramekins with chopped, cooked spinach, leaving a cavity in each. Break an egg into this, sprinkle with salt, pepper, and add a teaspoonful of butter for each. Set into a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are set. Serve with catsup.

For a course dinner a cocktail is often served as a stimulant; on this account oysters, clams and various appetizing condiments are used, the object being to stimulate, not cloy the appetite. Fruit cocktails are enjoyed by most people as they are appetizing without being too filling.

Speaking of Coins

Most Americans look upon the silver dollar as the most cumbersome coin ever minted. But it is put completely in the shade by some of the old Swedish pieces. In the museum at Falun, in Sweden, there is a copper coin dated 1644 which measures 25 inches by 13 and weighs over forty pounds.

Great Consumers

The American people consume more coal, coffee, chewing gum and propaganda than any other.—Duluth Herald.

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of May View, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their housework easily, happy homes are the result.

Thousands of testimonial letters have been received from women in different walks of life, stating that the Compound has helped them.

Cemetery to be Cleaned of Weeds

The suggestion has been made that those having relatives buried in Holy Cross cemetery give a day's labor to cut the grass on the walks and otherwise improve the appearance of the burial place that has been neglected lately. The suggestion is a timely one. A day should be set for all to meet at the cemetery and clean-up God's Half Acre and make it as attractive as possible. We should not neglect the dead, make their last resting place beautiful in appearance, fragrant with flowers, those emblems of love. Will some one lead in this movement? You loved those dear ones in life, why neglect them in death? This paper will be pleased to publish any suggestions. Let's hear from you who have loved ones sleeping their long last sleep in this neglected burial ground.

Fighting Caterpillar Pests

Spraying machines are busy in this community with the caterpillar pests. All the oaks are being sprayed to save the verdure of the oaks which are attacked by the little pests. Expert horticulturalists say the pest will not be as bad as they were last year when the trees were denuded of their leaves. Those fortunate in having oaks on their property should have them sprayed at once and while the spraying outfits are in the locality.

Incorporation Defeated

After a thirty year struggle for incorporation by the people, the voters on Monday last defeated the issue by twenty-nine votes. Incorporation would have carried but for the personal animosities injected into the campaign which was also fraught with much bitterness. However incorporation is not dead. It will again be brought before the citizens. The people have spoken and all must submit to the will of the majority. Let the differences of the several factions be buried and let all pull for a greater, a bigger and a more progressive Menlo Park. Let's have harmony, a better feelinf and a concerted action for the advancement of the community.

WOODSIDE

What is a fire department without a firemen's ball! With the completion of the fire house for the Woodside Fire District, it became evident that the very next thing on he program was a ball to be given by and for the firemen. So a dance has been announced for the night of May first at which there will be a jazz band and refreshments and prizes for the dancers and all those things that go to build the fame of Firemen's Balls. The dance will be held at the old town hall and out of respect to the ancient foundation of that structure, it is reported that the Charleston will not be upon the program of dances.

The manufacturers of noise producing sirens will stage a contest on Saturday at the bell tower of the new fire house to determine which apparatus can throw its raucous tones the greatest number of miles. Listeners will be stationed at Twin Peaks and at the summit of the Santa Cruz grade to report by radio which of the noise producing instruments is heard most clearly.

T. C. Tibbs and family are planning to move from Woodside to Stanford Park, near Palo Alto, where a new house is being built for them.

Four new residences were begun this week in the Woodside Glens tract. The owners of this property have built several miles of winding roads through the hills and opened many attractive sites for week end or summer cottages.

Mrs. John D. Gish returned on Friday night from a three weeks' visit with friends at Pasadena.

The Woodside church is a growing institution. Eight new members were admitted to the fellowship of the church last week.

UNION ARMY OFFICER VISITS P. P. CHAMBERLAIN

Colonel Everett Foster of Watsonville was here on Thursday calling on his old comrade, P. P. Chamberlain. At the outbreak of the civil war, when both were young men, they joined the Third Minnesota regiment. Foster, became Colonel. They fought shoulder to shoulder in all the big battles of that famous conflict and both were mustered out at their home town in Minnesota. Colonel Foster was born in Massachusettes on March 17, 1835. He is still hale and hearty and has the appearance of a man of sixty-five. He owns an apple orchard at Watsonville, in which he works daily. Both old comrades spent Thursday in going over the stirring times of the sixties when the Union was threatened and only by the bravery of such men as Colonel Foster and Mr. Chamberlain was it saved. The American people owe much to the old soldier who bared his breast that this country may remain one and indissoluble.
